Reverend Matt Hale, America's foremost political and former leader of the pro-White and anti-Jewish Church of the Creator, announced today that he has asked Representative Aaron Schock (R), his U.S. congressman for the district of his hometown in Illinois, to launch a congressional investigation into the criminal conduct of judges Frank Easterbrook, Richard Posner, and John Tinker of the Seventh Circuit Court of appeals. These judges recently falsified the facts of Hale's case for freedom on appeal in order to deny his release from prison that was required by law. Congressman Schock is presently considering Hale's request.

Until his arrest in 2003, Hale was America's most well-known advocate for White people, appearing numerous times on shows such as Today, Good Morning America, CBS This Morning, and others as well as being known for his public speeches around the country. A graduate of Southern University School of Law, he was convicted in 2004 on phony charges of having solicited the murder of Chicago federal judge Joan Lefkowitz even though there is no evidence that any such solicitation occurred. He has sought to take a lie detector test to corroborate his innocence and seeks media assistance to bring this about. The reporter who succeeds in helping him obtain the lie detector test will of course get the scoop on the results.

From his prison cell in solitary confinement at the infamous "Supermax" prison in Florence, Colorado, Reverend Hale had this to say about his call for a congressional investigation of Easterbrook, Posner, and Tinker:

"The simple fact of the matter is that the misconduct committed by Easterbrook, Posner, and Tinker in my case is clear and absolutely reprehensible. When judges outright lie about a man's case for freedom in order to deny him that freedom, not only do they egregiously wrong the man in question but they destroy any and all credibility of the legal system itself. These are things that the Congress of the United States should rightly be concerned about. It is my hope that Representative Schock, though he is young and new to Congress, will have the guts to take on this corruption and will refer this matter to the House Judiciary Committee. Ideally, I would like to see the three judges be impeached as well as criminally prosecuted since lying about the facts of a case on appeal in order to deny the appeal constitutes obstruction of justice in violation of 18 U.S.C. sec. 1503. Judges shouldn't be above the law any more than anybody else."
